Twenty-one of the thirty members of the Welfare Club were present at the meeting this week, the afternoon being spent in sewing on garments to be used for needy families under the supervision of Mrs. Ruth W. SPLENDID ADDRESS AT LIBRARY MEET

Mr. Greene, Mrs. Bendel and Orchestra Delight Audience of 50

C. S. Greene, veteran librarian of the state and one of the out-standing men of that profession in the entire country delighted an audience of fifty at the open meeting of the Niles Library Association held Wednesday evening. Members of the board of directors who planned the meeting were delighted with the attendance and the enthusiasm demonstrated and are expecting an even larger gathering when the next Library program is announced.

Several numbers by a string septet and clarinet, by school children under the direction of John Kimber, instructor in instrumental music for the township schools, were enthusiastically received and the young musicans were encouraged to take advantage of each opportunity for public appearance. Considering that some of the performers had only been studying about two months and that this was the first time the players had played under such intimate circumstances, the rendition of the several numbers was exceptional.

Mrs. Roland Bendel delighted the grown-ups as well as the children with her story-telling and her review of the success with which the Monday story hour at the library has met.

Miss Elizabeth Shinn presented to the Library Association a copy of the American Standard Version of the Bible as the gift of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Niles Congregational church.

F. Vernon Jones, president of the library board, presided but gave credit for planning the program to Mr. Fisher who had been chairman of arrangements. The speaker of

DRUNKEN BANDITS POSING AS REVENUE MEN LOOT ALVARADO APARTMENT HOUSE

Black-jacking hi-jackers is Alvarado's latest, with Alfred Guteriez being the principal victim. According to reports from Constables Manuel Bernardo and Tom Silva, two drunken bandits, posing as revenue officers, entered the apartment house of a Mexican in Alvarado last Friday morning about 2 o'clock, attacked the five inmates, black-jacking Guteriez inflicting a severe scalp cut, and escaped in an automobile with $120 in cash, $110 of this having been taken from Guteriez.

A twenty-dollar gold piece was included in the cash taken and it is hoped this will be the means of tracing the bandits.

Mrs. Mary Guteriez, M. Eomino, Al Raymond and D. Cortez were the other members of the party attacked. Guteriez was given medical attention in Centerville.

Washington Union High School Is Closed Because Of Influenza

WASHINGTON UNION high school was closed Wednesday on account of the large number of students absent because of the epidemic of influenza widespread throughout this part of the county. Although parents should observe extreme care in protecting themselves and children from this contagion as much as possible, there is no cause for great alarm according to reports from local doctors and the health nurse, Miss Lena Schinnick.

"Children should be kept away from all places where crowds are congregated, especially from meetings held indoors," stated Miss Schinnick. "Any person suffering from a cold who has a temperature should be kept in bed three days, thus eliminating the danger of spreading the cold or influenza and also as a precaution against complications setting in with the patient himself. The particular kind of influenza going the rounds at present is not of the deadly variety, the only danger being development of pneumonia which will not occur if proper treatment is given in the first stages of the illness.

"Parents should not be alarmed but they should insist upon children staying in bed if there is temperature accompanying the cold."

The high school will remain closed until Monday and possibly longer. Although there have been a number of absences from grammar schools both among teachers and pupils there has been no indication of their closing.

Southern Pacific Train Wrecked In Niles Canyon This Morning

A dragging brake beam under a car of sugar beets was believed to have been responsible for the wrecking of a west-bound Southern Pacific freight train in Niles canyon early this morning which killed nine head of beef cattle and scattered scores of wild steers over the right-of-way, highway and surrounding hills.

The wreck occurred on the sharp curve above Stone Bridge. The beet car was the first to jump the track. It turned sideways across the rails and the two cattle cars plowed into it. Directly behind the cattle cars was a shipment of race horses being shipped from Boise, Idaho, to the Tanforan race track for the meet held there. The horses, which were under the care of H. R. Doherty, trainer, were badly shaken up but showed no evidence of having been seriously injured. However, they were in such nervous condition that they will have to be withdrawn from the meet, Doherty said. The horses belonged to the James, Peterson and Cordell stables.

The steers had been brought from Mexico and were consigned to a San Francisco stockyard. A number of those now roaming the hills were believed to have been so seriously injured that they will die.

The wreck tied up traffic on the Southern Pacific's main trans-continental freight line for several hours and made it necessary to transfer passengers on the early Oakland bound pasenger trains around the tangled cars.

HOOVER TEA IS GIVEN AT HOME OF MRS. BUNTING

Meeting at the home of Mrs. J. A. Bunting Tuesday afternoon, an enthusiastic gathering of about fifty people heard Mrs. Herbert Carter and Mrs. J. G. Kearny speak. The two women who spoke are on the Republican campaign committee and Mrs. Kearny is Grand Past president of the Catholic Ladies Aid society. The work that women have done in this presidential campaign and the value of Hoover Teas were gven their share of praise. Arrangements for the tea were made by Mrs. F. V. Jones, general chairman, and her committee.

Wesley Grill Is Open For Business Now

Niles boasts another restaurant. The Wesley grill opened Thursday evening, featuring American and Italian cooking. Invitations to a free dinner were issued, and many people took that way of getting acquainted with the new place.

The grill is located in the Wesley Hotel Building, but is under separate management. It features a noon day meal of ravioli and coffee for thirty cents, besides the regular a la carte menu.

Ten names have been attached to the petition asking for an election on the subject of incorporation the first day it was circulated, according to Dr. Chas. Law, the following being the signed supporters of local government:

Dr. Chas. H. Law,
Mrs. Norman Parks,
J. C. Shinn,
Norman Parks,
L. E. Smith,
A. F. Johnson,
J. E. Townsend,
D. Yates,
Dan Marble,
F. V. Jones.

Winning their fifth straight victory last Sunday, the Kraft Juniors scored 15 to 2 against the combined efforts of the married men of Niles. Next Sunday the Bank of Italy of Oakland will play at the Kraft Park and the home team will do their best to beat the visitors and hope to win their sixth straight victory of the season.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE VOTES ENDORSEMENT OF MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

Local Paper Will Play Important Part In Campaign

Niles Chamber of Commerce voted at its Tuesday luncheon meeting to endorse the movement for incorporation and to circulate a petition asking for the signatures of fifty registered voters of the fire district, the boundaries describing the portion of land to be included, asking for an election as to whether municipal government should be established. The vote stood eight for and three against, a number of those who had been present at the luncheon having left just before the vote was taken.

Those voting in favor of circulating the petition were: Dr. Chas. Law, Lester Duffey, H. E. Leach, A. L. Johnson, J. E. Townsend, Jack Crawford, F. V. Jones, L. E. Smith.

Those opposing were: W. B. Kirk, Dr. H. E. Morrison and Al Juhl.

Although this matter has been under discussion for the past several months, speakers for and "announced-to-be against" the matter having been heard at various and sundry times, committees having been appointed and figures read and talked about, this is the first time the Chamber of Commerce has definately stated just where it stood as an organization on the incorporation question.

As usual, the matter was brought up by Dr. Law, who stated that while he personally was for it, it was not a matter of having incorporation or not having it, but that it seemed proper for the question to be settled one way or the other since it had been under consideration by the Chamber of Commerce.

"Let's decide the matter. If the attempt to secure local government fails then let's forget about it for at least ten years," he said. Dr. Law then presented the petition he has had prepared (having been on a committee appointed recently for the purpose of investigating the matter of incorporation) the paper including the petition drawn up in proper form and also the legal boundaries of the fire district and a place for signatures. Dr. Law was the first to sign the petition.

Considerable discussion arose over the apparent misunderstanding of the petition. This paper calls for an election on the subject and signature does not necessarily mean that the signer is in favor of incorporation but that he is in favor of having the matter brought before the people in order that a vote can be taken to see whether the residents of the community really wish to be incorporated or not.

Lester Duffey brought out the fact that if the project is to be put over it will require a considerable program of education inasmuch as most of the people are not in a position to know whether they are in favor of incorporation or not because they do not know the facts in the case—what the extra cost will be, what the benefits will be, etc.

President Braun suggested that the Township Register be asked to prepare a symposium on the subject, giving all the facts and figures, explaining just what territory would be taken in, what the cost would be, etc. He also suggested that when this story is printed the Chamber of Commerce see to it that a copy be presented to each resident within the district so that a full explanation of the matter could be read and studied and the individuals con-

NO REPORT ON DAM SITUATION AS YET

Investigation of the Calaveras dam situation is still in the hands of the executive committee of the Niles Chamber of Commerce, according to President Harvey Braun at Tuesday's meeting.

W. B. Kirk brought up the matter, asking for a report, and stating that he was anxious that something be done in regard to the matter.

President Braun replied that this and other matters would be considered at an early meeting of the executive committee and that if a letter had not been forwarded to the railroad commission already, one would be sent immediately.

Mrs. Mary Sherman of Santa Cruz is visiting with her cousin, Mrs. Emilie Chittenden and will be here for about two weeks.

CONSIDER THE LILIES

TEXT—"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these."

These words are part of the famous Sermon on the Mount delivered by our Lord to His disciples. This passage is one of the gems of English literature which have helped to make the Authorized version of the Bible an abiding classic of the English language. We are here invited by our Lord to consider the lily of the field (not the lily of the cultivated garden). To those who have the patience for such a study a veritable storehouse of treasure awaits. Let us remember first of all that the immediate setting of the text was the anxiety shown by the people concerning the needs of their everyday lives. Jesus, seeking to allay their fears had just said, "Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them, are ye not much better than they?" And he draws their attention to the lily of the field which is clothed with delicate beauty without the aid of man. It has been said that the present cry about the high cost of living began to be heard about the time patches went out of date. Whether this is so we do not know, but we do know that anxiety about food and raiment is universal. Now Jesus is seeking to show that no matter how real the fears of the people may be regarding these matters, it need not be so with the Christian. It is the birthright of every Christian to enjoy day by day that ease of mind which comes from a feeling of security regarding present and future needs of life. This, certainly, is what our Lord was trying to teach us when he invited us to consider the lily. However, the lily of the field has other lessons for us.

The Lily teaches us that there is design in the world.

I am rather hazy about the lily which grew in Palestine. I do not know just what it was like. But that need not affect our study for we can just as well use the Golden Poppy of California or any one of the 1600 varieties of wild flowers which grow in this state. They will teach us similar lessons about the care of God. The first lesson I would draw your attention to is the evidence of design. Its evenly arranged petals; its masterly construction; the similarity of the species; all tell us that some unseen, designing hand has been at work. Is this world run by chance? Am I here through a whim of fate? Can it be that after all there is Purpose in life? Surely the lily teaches us that there is. If there is design anywhere, why not everywhere? Man believes in a purposeful universe. The soldiers were almost fatalists. Many of them believed that they were immortal until the bullet which had their name on it found them. It is very helpful to realize that we were not meant to be blown about by the winds of chance. Every man has his task and the only unhappy men are those who live from policy instead of from principle. Men may get rich by bootlegging or some other form of lawlessness but these are the pariahs of the human race; the off-scouring of the nation and the dregs of society. The Christian who makes his living honestly is worth ten thousand of such.

The Lily reveals the Infinite care of God.

I have used the words "Infinite care" advisedly. The flowers of the field show us that the touch of God is infinitely careful. It is said that if you merely touch the flower of the Camelia a brown spot will result. You cannot touch the wing of a butterfly without marring it. The delicate beauty of the lily is the work of God. It were foolish to paint the lily for it looks best as it comes from the hand of God. Lip sticks and rouge may stimulate the jaded complexion but is cannot deceive; neither is it a substitute for the bloom and health of youth.

Some years ago I spent Christmas day in a down town mission in San Francisco among the out of works and the down and outs. I noticed one man who looked as though he had seen better days. When the hymns were sung and when the speakers were giving their messages of encouragement I noticed tears running down the cheeks of this man. They were quiet tears. I might even say they were tears of happiness. They were certainly not tears of regret or remorse but they were tears which came to him because he had felt the infinite touch of God and he had found that it was infinitely careful. God has a care for us.

The Lily teaches us that God loves beauty.

It was Robert Burns who said:

ART MODEL BALL STAGED BY PRESS CLUB OF OAKLAND

Designed as the most colorful event of the season, an Art Model Costume ball will be staged in the spacious Oakland auditorium Saturday night, October 27. The event is expected to attract thousands of persons not only from the Eastbay but from interior points.

The Oakland Press club, sponsoring the novel affair, is today a center of intense activity as scores of committee workers array entertainment and display features that are expected to definitely establish the ball as the ultimate in originality and jollity.

Two outstanding features are arranged for the ball, appearance of a large array of art models who will vie for prizes for facial beauty and symmetry of figure. The other will be a parade of horribles, the grotesque procession held particularly fitting in view of the proximity of Hallowe'en.

Some of the Eastbay's prettiest and most shapely girls have entered the model display. Prominent business organization are entering contestants while clubs and fraternal orders are falling into the spirit of the thing and are supporting choices for pulchritude honors.

Luther W. Rood, ex-president of the Press club and prominently known in newspaper circles of this part of California, is general chairman of affairs. He is being aided by several score of other newspaper men and by associate members of the club.

The motif for the ball is based on declaration by a University of California art instructor that models are becoming scarce. The press club wishes to demonstrate that there still exists in and near Oakland a sufficient number of pretty young women to supply the most exacting demands.

Prove CYCOL yourself— you'll find it has "endurance beyond belief"

Stability The new Cycol will stand the hardest kind of usage. It is refined to meet the severer conditions of heat and pressure developed by the modern high compression engines, assuring you an unbroken oil film where heat, pressure and friction are greatest.

No Acids The new Cycol refining process eliminates the use of acids, though most refiners use them. While acids clear the "crude oil" they chemically change its structure and composition, thus seriously cutting its lubricating value.

Such oils break down under engine temperatures. They distill off and escape as vapor through the breather exhaust.

The new refining process of Cycol selects from the "crude" those elements of greatest lubricating value and stability in performance, rejecting those elements which readily break down under engine heat and cause excessive carbon deposits.

So Cycol gives a protective oil film on cylinder walls and moving parts, not vapor at the breather pipe.

Less Carbon As to carbon, Cycol like all oils deposits some carbon. But it deposits less carbon than any other oil. The most exhaustive tests have proven that statement.

Even more important, the carbon that is deposited by Cycol is soft and easily removable. It is not hard or sticky and cannot scratch a cylinder.

Prove it yourself Cycol gives you the finest results you have ever known —more perfect lubrication, "endurance beyond belief" and the elimination of carbon troubles.

So fill your crank case with Cycol. You can identify it by the new transparent green-gold color. Sold wherever the Associated Gasoline and Cycol Motor Oil signs are shown. ASSOCIATED OIL COMPANY, Refiners of

GOLDEN WEDDING HELD FOR PIONEER COUPLE

On last Tuesday nearly one hundred and forty people from all over the bay region attended the golden wedding reception given Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Vandervoort at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sayles in Newark. From eight to eleven o'clock in the evening friends and relatives poured in to extend hearty congratulations to them on their anniversary, bringing gold coin as tokens.

The Vandervoort family are old pioneers of this district, and the wedding fifty years ago was a ceremony that people here can remember as an event of importance. Some of the people who had attended the ceremony uniting these two pioneer families were guests on October 16, 1928.

Colleen Moore and Clara Bow in Niles

Clara Bow in "The Fleet's In" is the attraction announced for the local theater for Sunday and Monday. The reputation this picture has earned by its previous showings in the bay region leaves nothing to say except that those who miss it will be sorry and those who see it will have the greatest treat of the season. The fleet's in with a cargo of laughs—very nautical but very nice—Clara Bow, the girl with plenty of "it."

Thursday night Harold Teen is being seen along with Ranger in "Ranger of the North." Friday Hoot Gibson will star in "Clearing the Trail." Saturday night will bring the story of two fighting marines and a girl—"United States Smith."

Pump Contract Will Assist All Farmers

Under the uniform pump contract drawn up by the California Committee on Relation of Electricity to Agriculture farmers will have a basis of comparing the performance of pumps. Manufacturers and distributors of farm machinery have approved the new contract. B. D. Moses, secretary of the committee and a member of the University of California agricultural division, has planned meetings throughout the state and has already explained the vast improvement it will make in scientific farming.

This new contract has been judged favorably by the Farm Bureau Federation and the University, which is conducting a short course in agricultural engineering at Davis. Farmers have no guarantee of performance on pumps purchased and often would value an impartial comparison on which they could base their judgement.

"LOOK OUT FOR THE PEDESTRIAN" IS TITLE OF W.U.H.S. STUDENT'S ARTICLE

("Another one of the editorial series on subjects of community interest has been submitted to the Register by D. F. Gatchel, head of the Washington Union High School history department. Through his leadership the senior citizenship class is taking a vital interest in affairs and duties that are problems in the community where they live.

The subject chosen for this week by Doris Destrella is one that that is troubling every city and town of any size all over the world. In this age of air and motor transportation the people who do not travel by some kind of machine are likely to be disregarded. But under the title "LOOK OUT FOR THE PEDESTRIAN" the problem is brought out clearly and with force. That this community can benefit by the reading of such articles is a tribute to its aliveness and growth and the high school students are to be praised for their spirit of responsibility as future citizens).

It is a surprise indeed to learn that over sixty per cent of those injured by automobile accidents in this country today are "Pedestrians." In the bay cities there are large, painted, warning signs, also painted zones on the street surface, but these are often disregarded, and mean little or nothing to the motorist. When the traffic conditions become sub-normal the motorist then takes advantage of this fact, and commences again to disregard the traffic laws.

Motorists are inclined to become careless of the pedestrian at times, but concrete curbs, proper warnings, and well-illuminated streets will be the terminating result of this problem.

The education of the younger generation on the traffic regulations is also an excellent idea.

"If the motorist would live up to the traffic regulations, it would make this country safe for the pedestrain, and it would be the ultimate solution of this Pedestrain Problem."

RICHFIELD USES HUGE NEON SIGN AS AIR BEACON

Letters 60 Feet High Can Be Read Over Seven Miles Away.

Blazing its nightly message of guidance and cheer to aviators and motorists, the gigantic electrical Neon air beacon, recently dedicated atop Healy Heights, in Portland, Oregon, and rated the world's largest electrical sign, is now in operation

The sign, erected for the Richfield Oil Company, by the Electrical Products Corporation of Oregon, bears the lone word "Richfield" in letters 60 feet high. The complete sign is 725 feet long. Built of over 3,000 feet of Claude Neon tubes, of bright orange hue, it has a visibility on clear nights of over 100 miles, and the lettering may be easily read more than seven miles away.

The ceremony at which this record-breaking beacon was formally turned on was a most spectacular one, and was broadcast over KGW. At 10:15 p.m. Major Clarence M. Young, U. S. director of aeronautics for the Department of Commerce touched a telegraph key in Kansas City, Mo. A gong sounded in the Portland broadcasting room.

"Here it goes, folks," the Portland mayor, George L. Baker, who was waiting for the signal, told the listeners-in, and threw the switch.

At that moment, radio fans all over Portland looked from their homes toward the darkened sky of the southwestern heights. Instantly there was a transformation as the gigantic Richfield word blazed forth in colors.

At present the sign is being operated from dusk to midnight. Later, as night flying or touring occasions it, the hours will be extended until dawn.

PETITION FOR

cerned be in a position to decide which way to vote when the election is held.

Placing of boundaries was emphasized as one of the important items to be considered. Some present believed that residents of the sanitary district would be in favor of incorporation but that those further from the center of town would be opposed.

It was pointed out, however, that if territory is to be too limited, the population of the incorporated area would be too small—the fire district area being about the right boundaries according to an opinion expressed by a recent visitor from Walnut Creek.

F. V. Jones urged the importance of the Chamber of Commerce getting behind the move for incorporation if they voted in favor of it. "Endorsing it won't do any good, unless the members are willing to really work hard for the cause," said Mr. Jones. "Somebody must sponsor the matter and make an effort to put it across and the Chamber of Commerce is the only group in town that is in a position to do it. Personally I am in favor of incorporation and am willing to sign the petition calling for an election, but I am sure that the matter will not come to pass unless this organization gets behind it and works for it."

Mr. Jones also made a report of the recent visit of the committee to San Francisco as the guests of the P. G. & E. for the purpose of observing various types of street lighting. He reported tthat there was no doubt that better lights for Niles would be a good thing but as usual the matter of finances was the problem to be solved.

President Braun announced the P. T. A. benefit whist party for Nov. 2, and the library meeting for Wednesday evening.

SPLENDID ADDRESS

the evening was introduced by Mrs. J. C. Shinn.

Mr. Greene gave a most delightful resume of the library work being done around the globe, emphasizing the influence that has been exerted by the American system of library organization. He made a plea for a different type of American literature in order that the proper "message" might be sent to foreign countries where the American Library is projecting itself. He stated that he did not insist upon "namby-pambyism nor Harold Bell Wrighteousness" but that he did make a plea for the return of books based upon the faith of our fathers which would uphold the time-honored faith in the Deity and depart from the theory expounded by so many authors that "no intelligent man can believe in a personal God."

Mr. Greene's address was felt to be a rare delight and according to comments over-heard during the evening and since, his audience thoroughly appreciated the return of one of Niles' "old-timers," who was reported to be a "scientist," a "humorist" and a "scholarly gentleman," all of which he proved himself to be.

Members of the school orchestra were: James Beveridge, Alice Sequerra, Elsie Hodges, May Andrade, Elmer Steinhilver, Betty Bunker, Frank Furtado, Claire Bettencourt.

OPPORTUNITY FOR THIRTY GIRLS TO STUDY NURSING

Thirty girls of Northern California will soon be selected for free training in the uncrowded and well-paid profession of nursing. The offer includes free tuition, board, room and a monthly allowance. Girls must be physically fit, more than 18 years old and have a four-year high school education or equivalent.

The announcement was made this week by Dr. J. B. Cutter, director of the Children's Hospital in San Francisco. The Nurses Training School, operated in connection with the hospital, is the oldest on the Pacific Coast. The hospital was founded in 1875 with twenty beds. Today its buildings cover a city block, it has 325 beds and does charity work totalling $100,000 a year. This work is sustained by contributions through the Community Chest and otherwise.

Though only women and children are admitted to Children's Hospital, the nurses' training course of twenty-eight months includes care of male patients in other hospitals. While applications for training are being received now, the next term does open until January 1. The roll will probably be closed, however, in a few weeks.

RICHFIELD OIL CO. BUYS LAND TRACT

PROJECT TO BE HOTEL FOR AIR TRAVELLING PUBLIC AROUND LIVERMORE

Five Acres to be Used for Hotel, Hangars, Shops to Service Planes; Swimming Tank; County Surveyors at Work.

Negotiations were completed this week for the sale of a five-acre tract of land by Jas. Anderson to the Richfield Oil Company. The purchase tract lies near the corner of the Lincoln Highway and Rincon Avenue and adjoins the government airport at Livermore.

While the purchase of the land by the oil company in itself may be a small matter, nevertheless if reports concerning the motive behind the deal are true, the transaction may mean more to Livermore than the actual establishment of the government airport.

The Richfield Oil Company is contemplating the establishment of modern quarters, fully equipped to meet the demands of the air-traveling public.

It is reported that a modern hotel will be erected on the tract, hangars are to be built for housing planes and shops erected for servicing. A large beacon tower, taller by 100 feet than the government tower, will also be erected.

Another feature of the proposed establishment will be a swimming tank, water for which will be piped from the artesian well on Mr. Anderson's place just across the highway. The Anderson well has an unlimited supply of hot artesian water and this in itself will prove a valuable asset to the new establishment.

County surveyors were at work surveying off the tract Wednesday. Just how long it will be before the company starts actual work on the new project has not been definitely stated.

Mr. Anderson has also given an option on an acre of ground at the corner of the highway and Rincon avenue to J. O. McKown.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at Walton's Pharmacy.

This Little Girl Got Well Quick

"Just after her third birthday, my little daughter, Connie, had a serious attack of intestinal flu," says Mrs. H. W. Turnage, 217 Cadwalder St., San Antonio, Texas. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her.

"Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her pick up right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the carton to be sure you get the genuine.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her So Much

Kingston, Mo.—"I have not taken anything but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for 18 months and I cannot praise it enough. I weighed about 100 pounds and was not able to do any kind of work. My housework was done by my mother and my out-of-doors work was not done. I have taken four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and now I am well and strong and feel fine. WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At the Warren ranch, the "Three Bar," on the fringe of the "cow country," a stranger applies for work as a rider. Williamette Ann Warren—known to all as "Billie," is the owner of the ranch. The girl's father, Cal Warren, had been the original owner. The question whether the territory is to remain "cow country" or be opened to settlement is a troublesome one. The newcomer is put to work. Cattle "rustlers" have been troubling the ranch owners, the Three Bar, with a girl boss having suffered more than others. The new hand gives his name as Cal Harris. By his announcement in favor of "squatters" he incurs the enmity of a rider known as Morrow.

"Not so very hard—if you can read," the dark man contradicted.

The newcomer's gaze returned from down the valley and settled on Morrow's face.

"Do you run a brand of your own—so's you'd stand to lose a dollar if every foot of range was fenced?" he inquired.

"What are you trying to get at now?" Morrow demanded.

"Nothing much—now; I've already got," Harris said. "A man's interest lays on the side where his finances are most concerned."

"What do you mean by that?" Morrow insisted.

"You're good at predicting—maybe you're an expert at guessing, too," Harris returned. And suddenly Evans laughed as if something had just occurred to him.

Morrow glanced at him without turning his head, then fell silent, his expression unchanged.

A chunky youngster stood in the door and bent an approving gaze on the big pinto as he swung out across the pasture lot. The boy's face was small and quizzical, a shaggy mop of tawney hair hanging so low upon his forehead that his mild blue eyes peered forth from under the fringe of it and gave him the air of a surprised terrier, which effect had gained him the title of Bangs.

"I bet the little paint-horse could make a man swing and rattle to set up in his middle, once he started to act up," he said.

"Calico wouldn't know how to start," Harris said. "A horse, inside his limitations, is what his breaker makes him. I never favored the idea of breaking a horse to fight you every time you climb him. My horses are gentle-broke."

"But you have to be able to top off just any kind of a horse," Bangs objected.

"That don't hinder a man from genting his own string," Harris returned.

Bangs turned his surprised eyes on Harris and regarded him intently as if striving to fathom a viewpoint that was entirely new to him.

"Why, it don't, for a fact," he said at last. "Only I just never happened to think of it like that before."

Morrow laughed and the boy flushed at the disagreeable ring of it. Morrow's face wore none of the active malignancy that stamps the features of those uncontrolled desperadoes who kill in a flare of possion; rather it seemed that the urge to kill was always with him, had been born with him, his face drawn and overlengthened from the inner effort to render his homicidal tendencies submissive to his brain, not through desire for regeneration, for he had none, but as a mere matter of expediency.

"You listen to what the squatter man tells you," Morrow said to Bangs. "He'll put you right—give you a course in how everything ought to be done." He rose and went outside.

A raucous bellow sounded from the cookhouse and every man within earshot rose and moved toward the summons to feed.

"Let's go eat it up," Evans said and left the bunk house with Harris.

"Did you gather all the information you was prospecting for?" he asked.

Harris nodded. "I sorted out one man's number," he said.

"Now if you'd only whispered to me I'd have told you right off," Evans said. "It's astonishing how easy it is to pick them if you try."

All through the meal the gigantic cook hovered near Billie Warren as she sat near one end of the long table. It was evident to Harris that the big man was self-appointed guardian and counsellor of the Three Bar boss. He showed the same fussy solicitude for her welfare that a hen would show for her helpless chicks.

"Praise the grub and have a friend at court," Harris murmured in Evans' ear.

Billie Warren had nearly completed her meal before the men came in. She left the table and went to her own room. When Harris rose to go he slapped the big man on the back.

"I'd work for half pay where you get grub like this," he said. "That's what I'd call a real feed."

Waddles beamed and followed him to the door.

"It's a fact that I can set out the best bait you ever throwed a lip over," he confessed. "You're a man of excellent tastes and it's a real pleasure to have you about."

Billie Warren opened the door and motioned to Harris. He went into the big front room that answered for both living room and sleeping quarters. Indian blankets partitioned off one end for the girl's sleeping room.

"You had something to tell me," she observed, after he had remained silent for the space of a minute, sitting in the chair she had indicated and gazing into the fire.

"And I'll have to start it a little different from the way I first counted on," he said. "Have any of the boys mentioned my name to you?"

She shook her head and waited for him to go on.

"You won't care much to hear it," he announced. "I'd thought some of spending two years here under some other name—but perhaps it's better to come out in the open—don't you think?"

The girl had straightened in her chair and was leaning toward him, her face white and her gray eyes boring straight into the man's. She knew now who he was—the man she had more reason to despise than all others on earth combined. Of the Harris family she knew nothing at all except that her father's lifelong regret had been the fact that the partnership between himself and his oldest friend William Harris, had never been brought to pass. And this regret had, in the end, led him to try and cement that arrangement in the second generation. Five years before his trail had crossed that of the elder Harris for the first time since he had taken over the Three Bar brand; and when his will had been read she had known that on the occasion of that visit his old friend had played upon this sentiment to trick him into making it. On all sides of her she had evidence that men were wolves who preyed upon the interests of others, and there was not a doubt that the father of the man before her had preyed upon her interests through the sentiment of her parent; no other possible theory could account for the strange disposal of his property, the will dated and signed at the exact time of his visit to the Harrises.

The tenseness of her pose was replaced by lethargic indifference and she relaxed into her chair.

"I've known all the time you would come," she said.

"It's too bad, Billie," he said. "It's tough having me wished on to you this way."

"Don't play that game with me!" she flared. "Of course you've disproved every drop of human decency in advance."

"It sure looms up like that on the surface," he admitted ruefully. "But I didn't have a hand in cinching you this way."

"You could have proved that by staying away. I wrote you a year ago that I'd donate you a half-interest in the Three Bar at the expiration of the time if you'd only keep off the place. But at the last moment you couldn't resist having it all. Ten more days and you'd have been too late."

The man nodded slowly.

"Too late," he agreed and sat looking into the fire.

She had been almost a son to her father, had ridden the range with him, managed the Three Bar during his sickness; and such was her loyalty to his memory that not a trace of her bitterness had been directed toward her parent. He had loved the Three Bar and had always believed that old Bill Harris, its founder, had loved it too. His will had stipulated that half of his property should go to the younger Harris under the condition that the man should make his home on the Three Bar for two out of the first three years after her father's decease. The whole of it was to go to him in case she failed to make her own home at the Three Bar during her coheir's stay, or in the event of her marriage to another before the expiration of three years.

"Of course I'm tied here for two years," she said. "Or left penniless. If you can make it unpleasant enough to drive me away—which won't be difficult—you win."

"I wouldn't count too strong on that," he counseled mildly.

"Then why did you come?" she insisted. "Half of it was yours by merely keeping away."

"Maybe I'm sort of tied up myself—in ways you don't suspect," he offered.

"Very likely!" she returned; "sounds plausible. You might offer to marry me," she suggested when he failed to answer. "You could gain full possession at once that way."

He removed his gaze from the fire and looked long at her.

"It will likely come to that," he said.

"I'll put a weapon in your hands," she retorted. "Whenever it does come to that I'll leave the ranch—so now you know the one sure way to win."

"I hope it won't pan out like that," he said. "I'll be disappointed—more than I can say."

She rose and stood waiting for him to go.

"Good night, Billie," he said. "I expect maybe things will break all right for us."

She did not answer as he went out. Waddles hailed him in friendly fashion as he passed through the cookhouse, then wiped his hands and stepped into Billie's quarters. Waddles was a fixture at the Three Bar; he had ridden for her father until he had his legs smashed up by a horse and had thereafter reigned as cook. He was confidential adviser and self-appointed guardian of the girl. His mind was still pleasantly concerned with the stranger's warm praise of his culinary efforts.

"That new man now, Billie," he remarked. "He's away off ahead of the average run. You mark me—he'll be top hand with this outfit in no time at all." Then he observed the girl's expression. "What is it, Pet?" he inquired. "What's afretting you?"

"Do you know who he is?" she asked.

Waddles wagged a negative head.

"He's Calvin Harris," she stated.

Instead of the blank dismay which she had expected to see depicted on Waddles' face at this announcement, it seemed to her that the big man was pleased.

"The h—l!" he said. "'Scuse me, Billie. So this here is Cal! Well, well—now what do you think of that?"

"I think that I don't want to stay here alone with him while you're out after the horses," she returned.

"Wrong idea!" the big man promptly contradicted. "You've got to stick it out for two years, girl. The best thing you can do is to get acquainted; and figure out how to get along the best you can—the pair of you. Old Cal Warren had some definite notion when he framed this play; so it's likely this young Cal is on your side, too."

"But even more likely not," she stated. "Then what?"

"Why, then I'll have to kill him and put a stop to it," the big man announced. "But it's noways probable that it will come to that. Let's use logic. He spoke well of my cooking, which proves him a man of some discernment. No way to get around that. Now a man with his judgment wouldn't suspect for one living second that he could play it low-down on you with me roosting close at hand. Putting two plain facts together it works out right natural and simple that he's on the square. As easy as that," he finished triumphantly. "So don't you fret. And in case he acts up I'll clamp down on him real sudden," he added by way of further reassurance.

His great paw opened and shut to illustrate his point as he moved toward the door and the Three Bar girl knew that when Waddles spoke of clamping down it was no mere figure of speech.

Ancients Found Many Uses for the Ostrich

Several ancient nations found the ostrich a useful as well as a weird bird, a writer in the Detroit News relates. In Mesopotamia, 5,000 years ago, artisans fashioned drinking cups from ostrich eggs. The top was sliced off, the edges were smoothed and a pottery lid overlaid with bitumen was fitted. The pious Spartans are said to have used an ostrich egg to perpetrate a religious fraud, they having placed on exhibition the "actual" egg laid by Leda after Zeus had visited her in the form of a swan, and from which Castor and Pollux were hatched. Egyptians found ostrich feathers useful for ornament and the princesses had ostrich feather fans. Both the feathers and eggs were highly prized tributes from tribes to the south. In China, Chang K'ien, on his return from Persia in 200 B. C., brought something almost as strange as China's first grapes; it was a tale of a bird he had seen whose "eggs were as large as pottery jars." The Chinese were skeptical of such a story, but fortunately for Chang the emperor of Parthia later sent some ostrich eggs as a tribute to the Chinese court. In 101 A. D. some five ostriches reached China and they were at once dubbed "camel-sparrows."

Impression Not Lasting

At a movie, mother, who did not approve of the picture which was being shown, said to father: "Let's go now. I don't want Margie to see any more of this picture."

Margie, overhearing her mother, promptly remarked: "Never mind mother, it doesn't hurt me. I let it go in one eye and out the other."—Children, the Magazine for Parents.

Some Branches of Bittersweet

By JANET CATHCART

(Copyright.)

"DID you hear him?" gasped Miss Fletcher as the district manager left the room. "Did you hear him, Lucy?"

"Yes!" breathed mouse-like Lucy, as she resumed her rapid clicking of the typewriter keys.

"The—the big—goose!" substituted Miss Fletcher for a more descriptive word to apply to a chief who up to that moment had been the most polite and considerate of men; "all about some branches of bittersweet on my desk." She rearranged the brown twigs, heavy with rich red and orange fruit, and held her fingers in position to resume her work at any moment. "Barked at me, he did. Says he, 'What's that?' and I says, 'Bittersweet from the country, and all it needs is some wild clematis, all gray and feathery and—' 'Humph!' he barks again and goes off. What are you tittering at, Lucy Lee?"

"You are so funny, Jane! Try to bark 'Humph!' yourself and see—"

"You are shallow," interrupted Jane Fletcher, as she rattled the keys of her own machine. But occasionally her eyes roved to the closed door of the private office.

Behind that closed door Cleve Larabee stood motionless, his broad shoulders blocking out the light from the western window. A wonderful view could be had from this high window, but Cleve Larabee saw nothing save frost-touched leaves dropping around like tinted blossoms; the orange-red fire of bittersweet tangled with the curly gray tendrils of clematis, and Annabel Day—standing there. He turned from the window and sat down heavily in his chair. He had almost forgotten Annabel Day!

Fifteen years ago he had left Mossdale and sought a living in the city. His parents had been dead a year, he had little patrimony, and no prospects in the Vermont village. So he had said good-by to Annabel, refusing to bind her by any promise.

For a while they corresponded, but after a couple of years she had stopped writing.

He had come to be the district manager of a great corporation; and he had believed he was happy—until this afternoon, when the sight of a branch of bittersweet had stirred up all the old boyish love of the countryside where he had been born and raised, and—where Annabel Day had lived and loved him.

His brooding eyes gradually came to notice the flat package on his desk—the name of a well-known photographer was in one corner.

Idly he lifted a knife and severed the string and opened the papers; half a dozen photographs were soon scattered around him, enlargements of smaller pictures—and now, everything vanished and he was back in the hill country again—on the right was the deep gorge filled with snow and on the other side the tall hemlocks weighted with the fleece of winter. Once when they were children he and Annabel had played these were Christmas trees and hung them with all sorts of bright baubles; before him was the slope of the mountains, snow-capped and friendly; here to the left was a bit of autumn road—there, a glimpse of some quiet pond reflecting the old bridge and the bending willows—

Suddenly he woke up and gathered the photographs into a pile. Then he searched the wastepaper basket for the wrapping paper. He put on his hat and overcoat, locked his desk and passed out of the office.

"So," mused the pale clerk at the photographer's as he scanned the photographs on the counter. "I remember now Mr. Kulow sent them over for your approval. They are very popular among people who are from Vermont. Great country up there, and this is fine photography. There's a girl up there who does it all herself—makes a good living at it, too—some artist, she is, too—see the grouping of those trees—and this—that's a fine dog—goes with her everywhere, she says. We have a picture of her. Here it is."

Cleve Larabee stared at the strong, graceful figure vividly portrayed against a background of dark hemlocks, freighted with snow. She wore knickerbockers tucked into high boots, a heavy sweater and a man's hunting coat. A knitted cap revealed the soft masses of dark hair.

"Annabel!" muttered Larabee.

"That's her name," volunteered the clerk.

"It must be her daughter. I knew her years ago."

"She isn't married. Miss Annabel Day's her name, Mr. Larabee."

"How did you happen to send the pictures that she took to my office?"

The clerk pondered awhile; at last, "Oh, she wrote to Mr. Kulow and suggested that he send some of them to you—picked out the very ones you've had in your hand—that's all, sir!"

"That isn't all, young man, it's only the beginning!" and the fully awakened Mr. Larabee dashed out to call a taxicab, for there was a train to be caught at once if he was to reach Mossdale in the morning. He must be there to meet Annabel, who had refused to grow old, who had dared to send the message of the pines to his dull life. And as the train sped northward his heart grew lighter, for he knew that his love was not dead, but that the snow had kept it warm and alive.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Engine Cab in Front

So that the engine men can more easily control it, the cab of a huge rebuilt locomotive on a western line has been placed in front, directly over the cowcatcher, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The engine and tender together are more than 104 feet long, weigh over 322 tons, and a tractive effort of 105,340 pounds is possible.

WHAT DR. CALDWELL LEARNED IN 47 YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

MENTION THIS PAPER WHEN WRITING

EMMA'S ROSEWOOD SOFA

(©) by D. J. Walsh.)

IT WAS close and hot in the little west corner bedroom with the sloping ceiling, where Emma Pearson lay on her cot bed. The cot bed creaked and sagged and her sprained hip hurt her. But her heart hurt her more.

"What's the use of crying?" Emma thought over and over. "I couldn't help anything that happened. I can't help anything now. I've just got to make the bst of it."

The window was open, but somebody had considerately put a screen in it, to keep out the flies. For the crowd below drew the insects. Whoever saw an auction without flies? The voice of the auctioneer came in through the open window—"How much you givin' me for this table? Two dollars! Make it three! Three—three—three, make it four!"

"That's the sitting room table," Emma sighed. The dear old sitting room table! Emma tried to hear the name of the person who bought it, but she could not. Well!

It was her own household gear that was being auctioned off in the shade of the big elm—her chairs, her lamps, her carpets and, dearest of all, her rosewood sofa. She had wanted to keep that, but what could she do with it? There would be no room for it at Mrs. Shipway's where she intended to live in the future, for the small room for which she was to pay $3 a week was already furnished. Mrs. Shipway did not take mealers, only roomers, and Emma expected to get her meals out—that is, at Nelson's restaurant. The thought of food prepared by Mrs. Nelson was somewhat distasteful to her, but she could not make any better arrangement. Besides, she suspected that her new occupation of working in Fletcher's store would be trying at first, to say the least.

Her father's death had taken place after an illness that had extended over a period of several years. During that time she had nursed him faithfully and stinted him in nothing. A gentle, kindly old man he was, but still the long caring for him had told upon Emma. She had aged slightly; that is, a touch of silver began to show in the dark hair at each temple, and she had grown thinner, with a loss of vivacity. Such a pretty girl as she had been could not, however, be entirely effaced in a difficult womanhood. She was still wonderfully attractive, and Eugene Boyden would marry her in a minute if she would let him, and Eugene Boyden was a wealthy man. But she would rather work and keep on waiting for Dennis Steel to come back, even though she knew that people laughed at her for clinging to the foolish romance of her girlhood. Dennis had gone because there was nothing that he could do in Colchester—a straying, visionary young fellow he had been. But although he had roamed far, he had not found success—"goes from one thing to another faster'n I can keep count," old Mrs. Allison, his aunt, to whom he wrote, said. "Well, it's my opinion when he gets sick of running round after notions he'll come home and settle down on his father's old place like he should." Emma believed as Mrs. Allison did, and so she continued to wait.

Her father's sickness and death had used up all the money, the old house had been mortgaged and now Emma was holding an auction in order to provide herself with a rainy-day fund. And the morning of the auction she had fallen down stairs and wrenched her hip. So here she lay, waiting for the auction to be over before she was moved to Mrs. Shipway's. And there was no prospect of her being able to go to work for a week at least.

"How much for this sofa?" she heard the auctioneer say. Then she stopped her ears to keep out the sound.

The door opened and Mrs. Hoy entered.

"Things are going off fine, Emma," she said. "Just think, that mess of old lamps brought $7! You've no reason to worry."

"No, I suppose not," Emma smiled wanly. "Who got the sofa?" she asked.

"Why, I don't know. A man in a car stopped and he's bidding on it now. Mrs. Banner wants it. She's willing to give $16 for it."

"It's worth more than that."

"Well, you can't expect to get much more. The springs are awful weak. I tried them."

Emma looked at Mrs. Hoy's tremendous proportions and smiled again.

"Oh, well! I don't care," she said, and looked fixedly at the faded ceiling paper.

"If you want," said Mrs. Hoy, "we'll get you over to Mrs. Shipway's now. Then this cot can be sold. I don't know but what I'll take it—if it goes reasonable."

"Well, I don't care," Emma repeated.

"I'll borrow Mrs. Brady's wheelchair, and I'll get my husband to carry you downstairs," said Mrs. Hoy. "It's dreffful hot for you up here."

She went to the window and called loudly, and presently a big, panting man appeared. As soon as his wife had explained what she wanted he picked Emma up and carried her down and placed her in the wheelchair. The pain and the queerness of thus leaving her old home for the last time made her faint and she closed her eyes. She did not open them again until she was at Mrs. Shipway's.

"Well, you poor thing! You do have the worst luck," Mrs. Shipway said. "My, but you're pale! Lie down here in the porch-hammock, where it's cool. I'll bring you a drink of ice water. You going back, Mrs. Hoy?"

Mrs. Hoy nodded, intent on the cot bed from which she had just had Emma removed.

The water revived Emma and she lay there in the porch-hammock, sensing the pain in her hip and trying to keep her face straight while Mrs. Shipway was with her. Then Mrs. Shipway went back into the house and she was alone.

"Oh, well," she thought, "it's all in a lifetime. Some folks are made to be happy and some aren't. I'm one of the ones who aren't. But hurting my hip did seem like the last straw."

An automobile came into the street, and stopped. It was a dusty roadster, powerful and obviously second-hand. Out of it stepped a man who looked tired and excited. He came to the foot of the steps and paused, then he came up on the porch where Emma could see him.

They looked at each other a long minute.

"Em'ma! I—" he began. "I don't know whether you want to see me, but—" he choked.

She held out her hand with a smile. "I'm real glad to see you, Dennis," she said.

He came forward and sat down beside the porch-hammock and wiped his face.

"I just got back," he explained. "I was driving into town when I saw the auction and I stopped. I—I'm going to stay. Guess I'll run a market-garden. I got the hang of it out in California. The old place looks pretty seedy and the house needs some work done on it."

"The trumpet-vine has been real pretty all summer," Emma said in a low tone.

"Yes, I noticed as I came by. Well, I might better have stayed right here in the first place." His honest, handsome eyes looked wistfully into Emma's. "Why didn't you tell me to, Em?"

"Why, I didn't have any business to tell you," Emma answered.

"Yes, you did. You had all the business in the world. And you've got it yet, Em," He reached out and got hold of her hand. "I've bought a few of your old things, that old rosewood sofa and—you know," he breathed fast, "I could just see you sitting on it under one of those gold-shaded lights. I thought the things would help furnish my house. I thought—" Suddenly he was red, stammering, boyish again. He gripped her hand. "Em, if you knew how I felt about you, you'd marry me," he said.

Ten minutes later Emma drew herself out of his arms with a glory on her face that made her beautiful to her lover's eyes.

"Oh, Dennis!" she said. "They're putting up my old base-burner. We are going to need it for the sitting room this winter. If you hurry you can get there in time to bid it in yourself."

Times Hard for the Ambitious Poet Today

"Times have changed," grumbled the poet. "It isn't as easy to find subjects you can write about as it once was. There's much too much law!"

"Look at Scott. A wild young man comes chasing out of the West and Scott makes a whole poem out of it. What would happen if you tried that today? You'd get one stanza done and then you'd fetch up against this:

"'Reginald W. Lochinvar, scion of a well-known New Jersey family, was arrested early last night as he was coming out of the West Shore ferry in New York. He was held in $1,000 bail for speeding and assaulting an officer. His excuse that he had had a date at a wedding brought forth the sarcastic rejoinder from Magistrate Hoolihan that he ought to have been glad he hadn't kept a date with the undertaker.'

"Or take Longfellow. Longfellow shot an arrow and sang a song and got a poem out of them. Would he get a poem today? He would not. He'd get something like this:

"'Supreme Court of Massachusetts. Case of William Smith, aviator, vs. Henry W. Longfellow, poet. Action for assault with arrow. Verdict for plaintiff for $5,000.'

"And this: 'Supreme Court of Massachusetts. Case of International Composers' Union vs. Henry W. Longfellow. Action for injunction to prevent defendant from broadcasting a song. Verdict for the plaintiff, with costs.'

"No wonder," said the poet, "that poets are either writing about their feelings or going into advertising."

These fences will be erected along the railroad tracks near places where slides may be expected and if they are broken the electrical impulses will set the signal block against the approaching train.

French Customs Men Move to Police Air

Convinced that smuggling of forbidden articles into France is being carried on by means of airplane and increasing at a rate which cannot be coped with by the ordinary personnel of the airport customs offices the finance department has received a request that a fleet of contraband chasers be created by the air authorities. The chaser planes would be authorized to order by signals the descent of the incoming airplane at the nearest landing field and its contents closely inspected. One estimate is that more than 1,000,000,000 francs worth of material brought into France in this manner pays no duty—gems from Holland and Belgium; securities from England and Germany, and works of arts from the countries of south and central Europe.

ATWATER KENT RADIO

you'd know it anywhere!

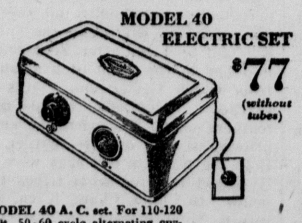
DID you hear Hoover? What did you think of that speech of Smith's?"

Hear this historic campaign clearly through an Atwater Kent. You won't miss a word—a syllable. Atwater Kent tone is famous for clarity. Atwater Kent workmanship can be relied upon. Atwater Kent resources make prices low.

Electric or battery—your choice

Some homes have central-station electricity, some don't. Both kinds want fine radio. So Atwater Kent offers modern instruments in two forms.

With the all-electric set, you need no batteries. Your radio is operated in the same way your lamps are lighted—from the house current, either A. C. or D. C. The current costs considerably less than a cent an hour—about as much as reading a newspaper by the light of a single 40-watt lamp. Think of hearing Smith or Hoover for less than a cent!



MODEL 40 ELECTRIC SET $77 (without tubes)

MODEL 40 A. C. set. For 110-120 volt, 50-60 cycle alternating current. Requires six A. C. tubes and one rectifying tube, $77 (without tubes). Also Model 42, with automatic voltage regulator, $86 (without tubes), and Model 44, an extra-powerful "distance" set, $106 (without tubes).

With an Atwater Kent battery set the programs will also come in clearly and strongly—whether you want speech or music—for the Atwater Kent name-plate on any set spells good, reliable reception.

Nearly 2,000,000 owners prove it

There's nothing untried about Atwater Kent Radio. Each year for six years it has set the pace in improvements, performance and price. Among rural families as well as in the cities, it is far and away the leader in sales and popularity. The nearest Atwater Kent dealer will be glad to give you a demonstration and advise you in the selection of your model.

OFFICE BOY TO MANAGER IS PHONE MAN'S RECORD

From office boy to general manager is the story surrounding the appointment yesterday of J. H. Corcoran as general manager of The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company for Northern California and Nevada. The appointment is announced by N. R. Powley, operating vice-president.

As directing head of 10,000 men and women in the area, including thousands of operators, Corcoran has been general traffic manager since 1920. His 41 years of telephone experience, make him unusually qualified to handle the problems resulting from the immense growth of this section. He succeeds R. A. Gantt, whose resignation as general manager was also announced yesterday.

Gantt has become vice-president of the Postal Telegraph and Cable Corporation recently purchased by the International Telephone and Telegraph Company, in which the Bell has no financial interest.

FRIENDLY CLUB MAKES MONTHLY GIFT TO HOME

Niles Group First to Come To Aid of Child Welfare Department House

A check will be sent from the Friendly Bridge Club each month to the Children's Department of the Southern Alameda County Welfare Board for the rest of this year to be used for the maintenance of the Children's Home in Niles, according to a vote taken at the meeting held last Thursday at the home of Mrs. James R. Whipple.

The following communication has been sent out by Mrs. Walter Flierl, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee to various organizations throughout Washington, Eden, Murry and Pleasanton Townships:

The Ways and Means Committee of the Children's Department of the Welfare Board of Southern Alameda County are finding it necessary to call on different organizations to help finance our little home that we are starting for destitute children and wards of the Juvenile Court. We are asking for a donation from your organization monthly until January 1, 1929. By that time we hope that this home will be on a financial basis where we can finance it ourselves. Should you see fit, however, to continue any support we will always be glad to accept same.

"Our home is located in the old Tyson place on the Niles Centerville Road. It is now being renovated and we hope to be settled shortly. When we are settled we will be glad to have you inspect the home at any time.

"Should you care to have any one of the following present this matter to your organization they will be glad to do so:

Mr. Williard Burr, president, Hayward.

Mrs. Walter Flierl, Ways and Means chairman.

Mrs. Ruth W. McCord, executive secretary Welfare Board.

According to information available to the writer, the Niles group has the honor of being the first to answer this appeal.

The next meeting of the Friendly Bridge Club will be held at the home of Mrs. H. R. Hunt on Thursday, November 8, at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Robert Blacow To Give Tea Oct. 31

Cards have been issued for a tea to be given by Mrs. Robert Blacow of Centerville on October 31 from three to six o'clock, at her home.

Here Comes the Bride!
WHAT a joyful moment it is, when the organ sounds the first chords of a wedding march! Every heart is filled with tenderness, as the bride and groom take their place before love's altar
It is the right of every girl to have her wedding beautiful and "correct" in every detail. The young lady in your family is expecting that kind of a ceremony—some day. Until she wishes to make it known, the date must be a secret most precious.
But when it is announced, she will be just as particular about having that done properly as about the flowers in her bridal bouquet.
When Wedding Invitations and Announcements are entrusted to this office, you may rest assured of three things: Whether printed or engraved, they will be quite in harmony with what you consider best. Their cost will both surprise and please you. And as for keeping a secret—why, even "the lucky man" himself could not bribe us to tell him when it will happen!

MORE ON Consider the

"A pretty face I will admit, is pleasing to the e'e, But without some better quality, she's no' the lass for me."

Beauty is not skin deep. It is from within. The Greek philosopher Socrates was so ugly that Alexander stopped on the street and laughed at him. Socrates was deeply moved but looking up to heaven he said, "Ye gods, make me beautiful—within." He is said to have been one of the pre-Christian saints.

Madame de Circourt, when a little girl, was told by her mother that she was so plain that she could never expect any man to fall in love with her. Going to her bedroom she fell on her knees and said, "Oh, Lord, I know I am ugly, I cannot be pretty, but I can be good." Come into my heart and make me pure and true." Madame de Circourt was one of the best loved and most saintly ladies of Paris.

Whoever would call Granny, with her wrinkled skin, and silvery hair, ugly? After all, it is the innate qualities of the heart which make us ugly or beautiful. We refer to some persons as having "ugly dispositions." That is ugliness indeed.

Bathing beauty contests are going fast out of date. Many of the beauties were "brainless" and that becomes very tiresome. After all, there is not much difference between a horse show and a bathing beauty contest. The methods of judging are the same in both cases.

But the inward beauty of the Christian is the beauty of the soul. That kind of beauty can neither be marred by age nor time. Christianity is not saying prayers nor merely going to church. It is the life made beautiful by the indwelling of the Spirit of Christ.

The Lily teaches us that God Is everywhere Present.

Science has shown us a profound and immense universe. So immense has our universe become that our world is as nothing compared to the greatness of the distant stars. It is said of one scientist, that when he made astronomy his study, he lost his faith in the care of God. "In a universe so great, how can God take any notice of us?" he said. This is the attitude of many cultured people. But it is the attitude of the insufficiently educated. It is said that when this scientist took his microscope and began to study the petals of a flower his faith returned to him for he saw there the nearness of the working of God. The lily studied in this way brings us very close to God. The telescope shows God afar off. Ever since men have begun to think they have desired to know God. That is the goal of human thought. The cry of Job has found an echo in many hearts: "Oh that I knew where I might find Him." And the answer is found in the words of Andrew, a disciple of Jesus: "We have found Him." The lily teaches us that God is very near. His handiwork is going on all around us. We hear the small voice in our conscience telling us that God knows, and Jesus Himself has said, "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father."

The lily has many other lessons for us but these are suggested and are not meant to be exhaustive. It was the Lord Jesus who said "Consider the lily," and when he speaks we do well to take heed. Consider the lily when you are worried. Consider the lily when you feel that ugly disposition getting the best of you. Consider the lily when you think that God is afar off and consider the lily when you feel the need of the infinitely careful touch of the hand of God."

PLEASANTON WOMAN ENJOYS FIVE MONTHS TOUR OF OLD WORLD

Mrs. Bertha S. Cope arrived home last week at Pleasanton from a five months' trip abroad which took her to many countries in Europe and for a cruise along the Mediterranean. She reports having a most enjoyable trip and seeing many of the points of interest so eagerly talked about wherever travelers gather. When she left New York City in April, she went to England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, going from there to Norway and Sweden [illegible] to Germany and France, and the southern part of Europe. Her trip through Spain and Portugal was of special interest as she did not visit these countries when she made the trip around the world a few years ago.

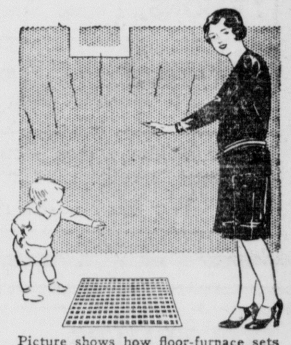
Good heating and fuel economy come only with heating equipment carefully planned and installed


Picture shows how floor-furnace sets in floor. Heat is controlled by handy valve.
You know how homes differ in their size and the type of building materials used. There is 10% less heat loss through plaster and board walls as through brick walls. And there is 25% less heat loss through insulated walls. These are some of the facts our staff considers before recommending a heating system. For after all, a furnace must keep your home warm no matter how your home is built.
Only trained engineers can weigh such facts and fit the proper heating equipment to each home.
There is no obligation if you have one of our men look over your home. The facts he finds will be taken back for careful consideration by our staff. Then you'll know the recommendations they make will be good. As we will always be in business we can only afford to recommend good gas heating equipment to our customers. And that is one reason why all our recommendations are carefully made. Another reason is, this company knows by years of carefully kept records, that good heating and fuel economy come only with heating equipment carefully planned and installed.
A postcard or phone call will bring a heating expert to your home.
